

Syrup and Salamanders

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 9 A.M. – 12 P.M.

We know what you're thinking. What do syrup and salamanders have in common?! Bring the family to the OSU Mansfield Campus this leap year, and it will all make sense. The College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Science faculty, staff, and extension educators are working with the campus to manage its 600+ acres of woodlands. There are many exciting areas to tour on campus, such as a new sugar bush (the place where trees are tapped for maple syrup) and a vernal pool that is home to salamanders! Come join us as we tour the sugar bush, take a break to eat pancakes with OSU's very own maple syrup, then visit a vernal pool to learn about the fascinating lives of salamanders. What more could you want on a Saturday morning?
